KLAUS WILHELM, later called Wild, the son of Johann of Toggenburg was born in 1510 and married Anna Zwingli form Wildhous in 1539. She was the daughter of the Bailiff Ulric h Zwingli and his wife Margareth Meili. This Anna Zwingli was the sister of the great Reformer John Ulrich Zwingli, born January 1, 1484 and fell in battle October 11, 1531 at Cappel.

Klaus Wilhelm, later called Wild, from the old Mr. Johann from the county of Toggenburg bought his citizenship in Glarus for himself and his five sons, Hans, Henry, claus, Peter and Bartholomew in the year 1555, payin 160 florin (Gulden) for it, 80 florin (Gulden) for the two younger sons. In the years from 1555-1557 he had two more sons, Jacob and David. This David was the ancestor of the Wild family in the Senftal. All the Wild's in Canton Glarus have this Claus Wilhelm and his wife Anna Zwingli, the sister of the Reformer John Ulrich Zwingli for their ancestors. This is shown on the records of the city library at Zrich and on the oldest records of the congregation at Haslen.

The following is the life story of JOSHUA WILD

I saw the first ray of light of this world on August 10, 1813. I was the second son of Hilarius Wild, the first son having passed away a few weeks after birth. I received Holy Pabtism August 13, 1813 being named Joshus Wild. My father conducted a butcher business. He was so well acquainted with cattle and hogs that many of his friends advised him to take up veterinary as there was need for just such a man in their community. The man having that occupation was then eighty years old and could not give it the proper attention. I then went to study under a man who was named Joseph Judd, who lived in a neighboring town, Gaster in St. Gallen. I learned the trade in a short time which was to the satisfaction of my friends. Then I returned home and practised with the aid and very good advice of my fiather, who was very kind to me.

My mother was a very good practical woman. Both mother and father had very little means. Mother's name was Cathryn Flury. She was a dressmaker and in that way earned enough money so that we did not have to suffer any.

My first remembrance is of the time when I must have been about three years old. I was put to bed and when I was asleep my parents called on one of the neighbors for a social evening. I awoke in pitch darkness. I screamed and cried until the neighbors called to my parents.

When I was four years old a little sister came into our family circle. This was in 1817.

The summer of 1816 was very cold and therefore the grain suffered a great deal, which meant a very poor crop would result and everything would be very expensive and there would be poor earning power. Bread then cost fifty cents a five pound loaf. Many poor people did pass away of starvation or wasted away to a skeleton. During that winter a great deal of snow fell, which endangered the lives of the people by snow slides. A family of eight persons were trapped and killed in such a slide. Many collections were made for the poor and suffering.

I remember very distinctly of owning a large Newfoundland dog, or butcher dog as he was called, a distant relative of ours was serving military services in France in this time of hunger. He came with his wife and child to beg for the dog in order that his family might have food on which to live. Father managed to spare the dog so mother and I led him to the center of the village of Schwanden where these people lived. In this house were two leaded windows, (stube). This Militaire wished to have some fun with the dog before butchering him. He took him by the front paws and marched him around the room a few times, but the dog soon became tired of this kind of foolery and took one grand lunge out through the leaded windows and home. When my mother and I got home the dog came to greet us. He came to beg for the dog a second time and was successful but this time he did not fool with him but butchered him immediately. The summer of 1817 was short but the harvest was in plenty. Jobs were also plentiful. Spinning and weaving employed many and the earnings were good.

I distinctly remembered the serious illness of my father. He suffered with rheumatism. I can remember when a number of men came to help him get out of bed and in again. It was a very hard time for us until he recovered.

When I was six years old I accompanied him on many a trip. Climbing mountains we would often have to sit down and rest. He suffered with asthma and often expressed his wish to breathe as I. He was already suffering with tuberculosis. I was constantly by his side. We had to stop real often to rest. We were always well treated wherever we stopped. As I grew older I had the privilege to attend school, but it was not compulsory. I enjoyed my lessons a great deal. My first teacher was an old man who spent his early days in Russia. He was severely adapted to the use of whiskey, so his family was poor. Of course his wages were small to begin with. He was a good penman so besides teaching he wrote letters for others. In the evening he would buy whiskey and promise to pay in the morning, but in the morning he would have forgotten. He was very easy with the children, especially those who gave him something occasionally. The only thing he despised, and despised very much was talking back, for that offense the students were severely punished. I attended this instruction until the age of ten.

I was very much interested in the printing of public documents kept in the court house, which very likely was destroyed in the fire of 1861, when the city of Glarus was burned. I was very much interested in drawing. I drew everywhere; even on our stone stove at home.

I had a grandmother and an uncle (mother's brother), who lived in Italy. At that time a great many went to Italy to work. The uncle often wrote very encouraging letters of the promising land and beautiful country where jobs were many. Grandmother could not read German script, so teacher Tschudy was asked to read them to her and then to answer them. Then she asked me to print them for her and she would read them until she knew them by memory.

In nice weather I was compelled to leave school to gather wood for the family's comfort, even if I was but ten years old.

Father was called to his reward May 7, 1823, at the age of only 34 years. He had been confined to bed only eight days.

I was gathering wood the day of my father's death and had had a heavy load and was peacefully resting when someone tapped me on the shoulder and told me my father had just died, which was a great shock to me. He was lying on the floor when I came home. His two brothers helped clothe him for burial but had no words of comfort. All they said was, "Now you are left a poor boy." These bony men were considered wealthy but they were cold and heartless, having disowned father for marrying into a poor family, and so they did not care for my mother either.

Praise God, their wish was not granted. God watched over me and heard my prayers. When we were with the other grandchildren, visiting at grandmother's, we were treated as strangers. This hurt me so much that I could not even bear to attend her funeral. The relatives were considered wealthy, but they would not even give us as much as a piece of bread. After the estate was settled there was very little means left, only one old house. The administrator got most of it as the law was very liberal as to the fees. No report had to be presented so what was left over was used for a death banquet. The administrator was rich and forceful and therefore several times swindled a poor family, but this money most certainly was a curse to the owner.

This was the beginning of a very hard time for us, mother earned some money as a seamstress and I gathered wood and worked in a factory.

After being a widow for one and a half years, mother married a twenty-five year old man from Owenberg. He was one of six brothers, his name was John Jacob Ott. My father and this man were good friends, father had taught him some veterinary arts. He enjoyed my father's books and followed that trade.

I remember very well having gone on a mountain trip with my father and Ott. I slept between them, never dreaming that Ott would some day be my step-father. It was very hard for me to learn to call him father, as it nearly choked me. He seldom allowed me to accompany him on trips which probably was the reason. I was compelled to learn the art of weaving, in a cellar which I despised very much and often looked for other work. For pleasure, I climbed the mountains to gather herbs and roots and flowers for my own use.

In 1827, Jenny and Blumer started a factory, which brought prosperity into the community. In 1828 we moved to Nitfurn, my step-father's house. There I was compelled to work for his brother. I felt very lonesome. I gathered herbs for my own use and sold some, but my pin-money was very scarce.

One day I journeyed to Schwanden, where a shooting match was held. There I met my mother's brother, who still took an interest in me. He asked me if I would like to try to shoot, this pleased me very much. I was allowed two shots. In the first attempt I did not shoot so good, but in the second I shot the center. For a long time I was the best but then an opponent shot one better, so I got second prize, which was a gulden. This pleased my uncle very much. At the second shot, I just got out with expenses, at the third shot I got forty shillings so that I had some money of my own.

In a factory where I worked, a watch was raffled off, I begged my mother until she consented to my buying a ticket. There were four lucky numbers. I was lucky to get some money. My mother convinced me to buy a goat. I got a beautiful animal, fed it well all winter and was well pleased with it. In the summer it was put up the mountain for pasture. I never saw the animal again. Mother consoled me by promising me my father's watch, which he had promised me on his death bed. When I got the watch, I was bargained by my sister to be given a silver spoon for it. I found out later that the goat had been sold and the money spent. That was where my money went.

In the spring of 1831, I looked for work. I got a job as an apprentice in a factory. This was hard and the wages were little. On holidays I stayed at home. I enjoyed myself in writing and drawing. I had few friends because of my poverty. I also had very little clothing. I drew and painted a picture, which my friend and co-worker posted in the workshop of the factory. When the boss saw this he admired it and asked who had drawn it. I was pointed out and given a better job.

From ten to twenty years I stayed weak, sickly and small. On the morning of December 23, 1832, when I was ready to go to work at the factory, my mother called me to her bedside, where she had for some time also been suffering with tuberculosis. She soon told me I should leave here and get among good people and I would surely prosper. She reminded me of God and his care, and gave me her blessing. She was only 42 years of age when she died. She left my sister and myself by her first marriage and two sons by her second marriage. Three sons died infancy by her first marriage and two daughters by her second marriage also died. Both of my parents died very young. I stayed with my step-father for three months or until spring, then with seven gulden in my purse, a bundle under my arm I started for Schwanden, my home town. Here I visited my uncle, Bott Strebbie, who was my administrator, a fine, kind gentleman, as well as kind wife. They treated me kindly, as one of the family. Once in my life I now at least had good food. I gradually became stronger. For the last ten years since my father's death I had found hard and hoped they were at an end. Thank God, I earned a little money and my board was reasonable, so I could spend more money for clothing and still have some money to save.

In 1834 a gentleman came to ask me if I cared to work in a spinning factory in Luchsingen, here I would be overseer and bookkeeper, which was quite an advance, of course it meant responsibilities. This same man was in a dry goods business in Rio de Janiero. He was not there long when the terrible news came that he had been murdered. He had many friends who mourned his death. There was lots of money lost through this.

As I was working in this factory which is told of above, there was a day and night shift. I had to get up at one o'clock and go down a stone stairs covered with ice. I fell and hurt my knee but did not stop working. Ice was coming to clog the wheel which furnished water power. I got an implement to keep the ice back. The workman who was supposed to do this just came on duty so I told him to let me take care of that ice as I was soon going home and could change to dry clothing, while he would have to stand in his wet clothing all day long, so I had to kneel in this water for hours which was bad for my sore knee. Soon everything was in order and the factory was running again. Then I went home and stayed in my warm room. I suffered terribly. A foreman who lived in Schwanden took me home with him, so I would be closer to the doctor. The doctor gave up hope, wanted consultation, and suggested amputating my leg. I hesitated and called my boss and told him the situation. I wished for a specialist, and my wish was granted. By morning the pain had disappeared but a great deal of puss had formed an opening large enough to lay in three fingers. The wound drained for ten weeks. My pay went on, but it soon disappeared for doctor bills and I was still owing. I had very little pleasure out of my money. I begged to be given an easier job and I would do the bookkeeping after regular hours. I wished I could learn a trade, I begged the gentleman to teach me mechanics. They told me to be quiet and satisfied but my conscience told me, you are not in the right place. I was soon permitted to have a lathe and work bench. I had to work four years for the same wages and I was already twenty-three years old and no trade experience yet, but that did not discourage me. I went ahead with fresh enthusiasm. I had good clothing and plenty to eat and no debts. Already in my younger years I made it my aim never to buy anything unless I could pay for it.

So I stayed my own boss. Evenings I spent in drawing, reading books and papers. My board and room was high so I bought myself a bed and slept in the factory. Many thoughts went through my head, one was, that I could easily support a household with the money I spent for board, washing and patching. I was happy when I soon found a maiden who promised to be true to me in storm as well as in sunshine. We were united in marriage in the church in Schwanden in 1838, May 10. We went on a honeymoon cruise on a steamship. Mr wife was a saving, mother-like kind. We lived with her parents. My boss soon brought us the good news that my apprentice days were over by good behavior, and so I was promised an increase in wages.

When I was yet a young man I made the acquaintance of a man twice my age, Joe Hefty, Basie Baties Gotti, ninety years old. He possessed many good books and had experienced a great deal. We became close friends. He was surprised that a young man like I would put up with an old man as he was. We discussed and planned immigration to America. He reached the age of 95 years. At which time he was hard of hearing, and his eyesight failed him. He had one daughter after which I named my own daughter, Maria.

The question of immigration was becoming serious. Some talked favorable of it and others could see no advantages. One thing they all agreed, there would be hardships to go have loved to migrate but dared say nothing at home. My wife's parents did not agree with me on that question. I also did not like to disappoint my bosses, where I was getting pretty good pay.

In 1841, we had a little daughter, who lived only three weeks. In 1842, my wife's father passed away. He was sick only six weeks. He left a fair inheritance. There being only two daughters mother stayed with us. The other daughter married a shoemaker. Twenty-eight weeks later mother died after an illness of only eight week's duration. Death came on May 6.

In 1843, Glarus planned a Swiss celebration. I looked forward with joy, but when I asked my boss if I might attend, he answered with an emphatic NO. This displeased me very much. He said if I went I need not come back. I did not think he was serious because work was slack, and I had not taken any time off.

So I went and in this time thoroughly enjoyed myself. There were military officers in uniform from every canton. When I came back I was fired. I consulted the manager who hated to loose me, but he said I must confer with the boss, who was new. I replied that the boss would have to come and ask me as it was he who sent me away. I was disappointed, but again I made the best of it. I had a lathe and work bench at home and in that manner in the home I could earn more than in the factory and had more leisure time. The thought of immigration was again in my mind.

In the fall my former boss sent for me and asked if I cared to work in the factory again, and receive better wages, but I was sure that this would only be a temporary position.

1844-1845. The project of immigration developed. The government encouraged it by giving twenty acres of land grants. This settlement was to be named New Glarus. Two experts were sent out to explore the land and buy it from the government for the immigrants. The government and privates encouraged it by offering money. They started in March, 1845, during which time papers were circulated and many decided to migrate. Many volunteered from different cantons. The journey was anything but route was mostly by water, from Basel to Holland, from there to Baltimore, to Pittsburgh, to the Ohio river, to the Mississippi River, and then on to St. Louis where they rested for a few days. They did not know where they might locate these experts since there were no mail services or trains to that part of the wilderness. They inquired of everyone and everywhere and finally traced them to what was called Wisconsin and then to Green County where they found the experts busy surveying the land. On August 17, after seventeen weeks of hardship they finally reached their destination.

I was very interested in the progress of this project of immigration and considered it an opportunity for myself and therefore did not want to miss it. In August and September, being quite favorable months in which to travel, I decided to take my wife and six and a half year old daughter with me. I prepared for this trip all summer and embarked on August 12, 1845 for Syracuse, New York, which was our destination. Here I had two friends whose occupation was carpentering. I hoped that they would give us aid and advice in this new and strange land. Henry Schindler and wife, a lady named Rosina Blesie and her twelve month old son hoping to meet their husband and father in New Jersey, traveled with us, also Baltz Jenny, a young man, who wished to seek his fortune in America.

We started by stage coach to Havre, from there to Paris, the largest city, where we spent a day to see the wonderful sights. From there we traveled by train, which was the first time any of us have ever been aboard a train. The train was drawn by horses. We arrived just in time to embark immediately, but we decided to wait for a ship that would sail in a few days. During this time we looked up a glarner friend who helped us to get better accommodations on board the next ship. We stayed in Havre six days, in the last days people came in great numbers. The owners of the ship demanded double the sum for the journey for the last ones. There was a terrible storm while starting the voyage. While we were just leaving the harbor a ship was seen struggling to get to the harbor, but that had struck a sand bank, so we could only see the top mast. Steamships were unknown, but ours was a good sail ship. The journey in itself was not very stormy, but ours was a very good long voyage lasting twenty-eight days. At this time this was considered as very good time in which to make the voyage. The very same day we landed a ship landed that had been on the ocean a hundred days. The ship that started two days before we started had landed two hours before we had landed. On our ship one birth and one death occurred during the duration of the voyage. My wife was bedfast most of the time.

One of the passengers had eggs packed in his trunk. I among others wished to purchase some of them for our sick ones. He asked an enormous price for them and when offered twenty cents apiece for them he only sneered. He put a nice basket of eggs on a table on deck which he said were for sale. Unfortunately for him, a sudden gust of wind came along and blew them down, breaking every egg in the basket.

The next day we landed. Mrs. Blasie met her husband in New York, and Mr. Jenny and the Schindler's and we took our baggage from the sail ship to a steam ship which would then take us to Albany, N. Y. On account of exchanging a check for money I was delayed a day, but my family could travel on. I disliked to travel alone but I met expert Duerst of New Glarus and a farmer from Mitlodi, mother's home town. Duerst was ill and could not give me much encouragement. I went by steamship to Albany and met my family. We all thanked God to be united again. I did not expect to find them so quickly. They were glad to find me because they had had to spend their last penny for an overcharge on which we had not figured. We traveled up the Erie canal which was a national project. I had a map which told me exactly how fast we were advancing. We arrived at our destination, Syracuse, on the night of September the 22nd. We spent our first night at a warehouse. In the morning we went in search of a good hotel. We stayed there all Sunday. The next day we looked up some friends, they were very happy to see us. They were Gabriel Blumer and J. J. Luchsinger by name. They welcomed us and helped us all they could. Luchsinger helped us to find a house and work. We had to struggle all night with the bed bugs even if the beds were clean. Schindler had no money and I had to furnish him too.

The first money I earned in America was for services for a long day. The Jews dared not kindle a fire even to light one on their Sabbath. I had to go to the Synagogue before daylight and start the fire and light the candles, about twenty wax candles. Then the services began which seemed to be nothing but a mixup. At daybreak I could blow out all the candles but two, which burned all day. In the evening I had to light them again and keep order. For many Jews it was a long day to have to fast for 24 hours. Of course, I did not fast. After their fast they had a feast. For this work I obtained 75cents. Soon I got work with a chair manufacturing company so I had work all winter. I had to work alone in the shop and so seldom saw my boss, in this way I learned very little English. Wages were small, 50 cents a day and later 62½ cents per day. We lived mostly on meat, especially mutton because it was only 2 cents a pound. This we cooked with rice which often made stomach discomfort. After being in the land two months we were blessed with a baby daughter. There was an unusual amount of snow this winter. There were a great many fires, first we also ran to ehlp like in the old country, but later we left that work to the firemen as is the custom in American cities. It seemed queer to us that other men went about their business not paying any attention to the alarm. I had been dissatisfied with my job for some time. It being, fasnackt, Schindler and I wanted to celebrate, so we went to the mail. We received the first letter from home which gave us a thrill. I said this is a good omen, we are in luck. Let us go to the railroad and ask for work. I would like that better. Unfortunately I could not speak English but I was lucky enough to get a job. This job required me to do many disagreeable jobs. My pay was small but I had an opportunity to learn the English and considered this good enough pay.

I bought a lot of land near the factory, but it was a water lot. I built a house on it. In spring when the water was high we could just about swim around in it. We were fortunate enough to sell it to the railroad president. We bought an adjoining lot which was somewhat higher.

One day during the noon hour one of the workers asked me if I would work at lathe, if I could master that, he would perhaps be advanced and I promoted. When the boss saw me he asked me if I thought I could manage it, so I told him I had learned the trade in the old country. As a result my co-worker was raised to engineer and I could step up and demand help instead of work when he was gone as when he had had my position. The boss was kind to me because I did as much when he was away as when he was watching, which was unusual with most of the others. Every Sunday we had company or we called on some friends. In this way we spent very little money for entertainment. We saved a nice sum of money and every month added to our savings.

In 1849 we welcomed company from the old country, my stepfather and his two sons, Jacob Ott Sr., and Anton and Jacob Jr., we were all very happy. They brought with them a girl, my sister's daughter, who was very neglected. She needed lessons in behavior as well as studies, Also a thorough cleaning up was necessary. They stayed with us five days then they journeyed yet to another spot of interest. They went to New Glarus, Wisconsin, where they could still purchase land cheaply. After that I became dissatisfied at Syracuse, so in the spring of 1850 we found sale for our house and decided to move west. On May 1, we started. Our neighbors and friends all wished us good luck and blessings. After a few days of travel by steam and train we reached Milwaukee. Here we met Henry Schindler, our friend who came over with us. He was a carpenter of furniture, but he disliked living in the city. He then decided to go west with us. I left my family in Milwaukee and walked to New Glarus. We happened to meet J. J. Tschudy who came from the colony direct, with him was a newly married couple.

After a few days of travel we arrived at a farmhouse which happened to be Tschudy's about 1½ miles east of New Glarus. Soon I got my first glimpse of New Glarus. I was sadly disappointed at the size of the village. Schindler and I then went to Madison and Monroe. There was no lathe shop in Monroe so we decided to locate there. Then we went back to Milwaukee to get my family and two big trunks. I was unable to locate them at first, but luck was with us and after I had found them we started for Monroe. We had one horse and a wagon. Mr. Tschudy had to go ahead of the horse displaying a cob of corn to coax it along. There was no faster means of transportation. Then we each bought two lots near the square with a poor house on it. On these premises we constructed a workshop and a show room and I installed a lathe. Of course Schindler had to turn it as we had not horse power. He soon got tired of this so our partnership broke up and I sold my share at a loss.

Then I located a New Glarus, where I was interested in buying a saw mill. I was compelled to buy 80 acres with it for the dam which I planned to use for water power to turn the water wheel. I bought lots of wood and 40 acres of Congress land. Soon I was running low of funds and there was no money in the colony to borrow.

Soon I was appointed by the colonists to help them obtain land fairly. There was so much graft then with these deals. This was a difficult task as the congress of Switzerland measured the land as they do there which did not work to the same advantages here. There were false agents who took advantage of these greenhorns. Until Pastor Streisgut and Peter Jenny, who were good honest men, came it was indeed a very hard task. Next I was appointed postmaster. I finally accepted in the interest of the colonists. The former postmaster was not trustworthy. His name was Bonsier and he had come to this country from Canton Wallace. He was very well educated and could read German, English and French. There were no newspapers and very few letters for which I was responsible so I received a very meager sum. There was some misdeal through the mails so I was asked to do the correspondence. Some of the people received land and money and others received free interest for ten years, etc. All in all they were certainly not treated alike.

I built a sawmill in 1851, also a house. We could not move into the house until spring, during which time we had to live in a very poor house. The winter was severely cold, oftentimes the water would not thaw out besides the stove all day. Then the terrible epidemic of scarlet fever covered the entire country. Many children died. Our own dear little Maria also was a victim of the terrible disease. Before that time she was a very healthy child. We were sad but when we had to see her suffer with convulsions 2½ days we gladly gave her into the arms of the Lord.

The saw mill did not work as I had expected. The iron material I had to get in Milwaukee, so I had to walk there after it, as the only means of travel was oxen and roll wagon.

In January, 1853, thirty one citizens went to Monroe afoot to get their citizenship papers. Everybody was happy. The county clerk poured a bushel of apples on a sheet. All the men grabbed them because they had not had apples for years. Some men took home the seeds and planted them and when the trees grew up they were called citizenship trees.

This same year I took the job of superintendent of schools for which purpose I did everything possible to improve the school system.

In the year 1854, we were blessed with another daughter. In that year floods were very common. Everything seemed to be at a loss. I hired a man to make hay for me, he worked a whole week and everything was lost in the flood. Fridle Schindler, wife and two children came from Freeport happy and looking ahead with great dreams. He hired out to a man in Albany to work in the harvest, but in the night cholera overtook him, and he finally died after suffering a great deal. Twenty-two persons followed in the same manner. It was indeed a bad state of affairs. The harvest was ready and nobody cared to work. Nobody knew who would be next. They did not dare to work and therefore lower their resistance or they would be sure victims.

Pastor Streisgut was the only doctor. Everyone was chewing garlic and carrying camphor which prevented the severe disease to some extent. People always had brandy on hand.

That summer I became ill, and nobody could run the saw mill, so I sold it with the eighty acres to David Klassy for $1350.00. The next year I bought a horse. The next year my ten year old daughter Barbara, and I went to Dayton, to the mill, we experienced a runaway and by being thrown from my seat broke my arm above the elbow. I did not know that my arm was broken until I wanted to take my pocket knife out of my pocket. Barbara ran to the nearest house, Fred Tschudy's, to get aid. This happened over on the Fred Schneider Hill, Fred Tschudy took care of my horse and we walked home. My step-father set my arm. The reason we were thrown off was because I had loaned my good seat to Pastor Streisgut as he was going to have his removed. In five weeks I was restored to my normal health, and took the wild horse back to it's former owner, as it proved to be to wild an animal for me. I really could not drive very well so I decided that I would be a very poor farmer and decided to start a store. I traded in butter and eggs and hides and then took them to Madison or Monroe once a week. One July evening a fellow came and asked if I would not like to drive two horses to Madison to take along butter as it was hard to keep in the hot weather, so I went with him. I was dressed lightly and as it cooled off at midnight I got a severe chill but the next day I felt all right, until about midnight the next night, I got a severe coughing spell for about an hour, this spell came back every night after that. My health had been shattered.

In the year 1860, I decided again to visit my old home in the old country, Switzerland, and decided to leave about May 31. In company with others I left for Madison. It was still very cold. From there we traveled by rail to Milwaukee. We got there at four o'clock. Then we went on steamship on Lake Michigan. We all landed at Grand Haven. From there we went by railroad to Detroit. The second of June we came to the Niagara Falls which could be heard for miles away. This itself was a miracle. This sight alone was worth the trip. From there we went to Syracuse, N. Y. Here I visited friends who treated me very kindly. Then we soon sailed for Europe. Our ship was of iron construction and we very soon became confident of it's safety. If I only could have stayed on the ocean my health would have been restored. After fourteen days we arrived in Liverpool. In the harbor there were many war ships. The masts of which reminded us of forests. Liverpool is a trade center. We were examined quickly for valuables. We stayed there all night. Then we went to London, here we saw a train go into a tunnel underground and one on top and an elevated train. At five o'clock we landed in London, the largest city in the world at the time. Here was a hotel manager who came to meet us, as it was Saturday night and no trains would operate on Sunday. So we took in the sights of the city. St. Paul's church was one of the largest churches in the world. Westminster Abbey, which contained statues of all kinds. I wish I could have spent more time there.

We then had to go to a large depot where there were forty tracks located. Over all these was a large glass roof. Here I had a glass of lemonade which cost me twenty-five cents. At noon we came to the English channel. The water was very stormy. The next morning we were over in Paris and looked up a German hotel near the Strasburg depot. We saw many wonderful sights in Paris. The large beer gardens, the menageries and gardens. We would have liked to have spent more time there, but our love for our homeland pushed us onward. That evening we went from France to Basel where we could see Switzerland. The air already seemed more free, from there to Zurich and then to Glarus. The sight made the tears come to my eyes. It was fifteen years since I had left my home with a heavy heart not knowing what would happen. Everything seemed so small. The mountains seemed closer. We soon went to Schwanden to a hotel where a daughter of the innkeeper recognized me. I went to visit my relatives. I fell into their arms and both cried. We had many experiences to relate to each other.

They thought that I was rich. I then took a certain diet and got lots of appetite. First, I drank whey, then plain mountain food. The scenery was beautiful, but a terrific hailstorm drove the hay and grain into the ground. After that many people left the hotel on account of the cold weather. This proved to be of great loss to the hotel keeper.

A man wanted to obtain some sure money so we had noticed he had his watch for sale. When I bought it and paid gold for it I was considered a rich man. Men talked to me that had formally disregarded me. Now they wanted me to tell them all about America. I found out that money spoke louder than character. Some time later I got a letter from Philadelphia, telling me that his wife and daughter had left him and that he was suffering a broken leg. He wanted me to find a job for him, but I had to tell him that old people could not get jobs. His pride was lowered, that is as far as a person will go when they pretend to be superior to others.

Next I journeyed to Luchsinen, Betschwanden to church. This was mother's home. Everyone was dressed in black. I was dressed in my summer linens and straw hat, which was not their style. I inquired about a man named Babler. He did not happen to be there but his son was. He seemed to wish that he had not met me, but I got to his home anyway. Babler tried to be polite but I could tell that I was not welcome. He invited me in to have dinner but after dinner he politely excused himself, that he had not been feeling very well, was his polite excuse. I said I should take a little walk before I left his home. So I sat for awhile when to my surprise, who should come but a number of his friends. Then Babler felt fine, and we all went for an afternoon walk, but it seemed that I was always left in the background. Babler whispered to me that I should have changed my garb, otherwise I should not have been in their company. I told him that it did not depend upon fine clothing so long as a man was honest. Babler then told me that the previous year a friend had visited him from America and that he was a real gentleman, but I happened to know whom he was referring to and told him that I would not uphold a swindler and a person who had served a jail sentence. He told me that if I would be better dressed I could go into this beautiful hotel with them, but I told him that I did not care to go as I was satisfied in a small place, but I thought I would go in there if it cost me twenty dollars. While at a table in there a stranger came in to my company. He asked me about the different conditions in America. We visited together and one after the other came to my table to listen to my story, even those who had shunned me before. This pleased me very much.

I then went to visit Jochim Klassy, father of John and Joshua, they wanted to send John to America with me, but there were so many tears that I suggested that they all come or none, so they sold their stock and came. On their way to Wisconsin they stopped at Syracuse, where candidate for president Douglas gave a long oration to about 3000 people. We stayed there three days and then traveled home. September 26, we arrived home very unexpectedly, well and happy. We found my family well and happy also. Before I had left I had signed a paper signifying that if I did not return my wife would be sole beneficiary of my estate. When I got home I destroyed the paper. I felt that my health was restored after being away four months. My oldest daughter was now married and had moved a hundred miles away. I had given them my horse and wagon to use until my return, so when a friend of mine went to visit them he returned with the horse and wagon. At my suggestion they traded their farm in Crawford county and came to live with us for a while. This year also brought us the great Civil War.

The Civil War was fought between the north and the south, New Glarus alone furnished 100 soldiers. This became a bad time. Taxes were high, whoever had lots for sale got high prices. On paydays the soldiers could send home money to their families. Some sent it to me to keep for them until they came home, others spent it for drink. Prices of all products were high, calico was 50 cents a yard, sheeting was $1.00 a yard. The gold dollar was worth $2.85. The trust of the American people was lost. Those who did not care to work stole money from those who saved hard earned dollars, swindlers were not penalized enough.

When the war was finally over, telegrams were sent to every capitol in the union. I happened to be in Madison, our capitol, when the news came. Such happiness, cannons were fired, there were fireworks, patriotic speeches everywhere. The next day before I started for home I bought a flag and placed it on the front of my wagon. Many stopped me on my way and asked why the display. I was very happy to report that peace was declared. When I got home the spring election was in progress, and there was great happiness. Mother now 81 years of age says she can remember the day clearly as though it was yesterday. Tears came to her eyes when we translated this portion. Gradually the soldiers came back. It was quite a change for many for they had to start working. Their easy income had ceased.

February 25, 1864, our second daughter Barbara married a soldier, Fridolin Streiff, who had enlisted in the army. After peace was declared he wished to go into business with me. This I approved of as my health was not very good, but this did not give us enough income for both families, so we moved to Paoli, this was twelve miles closer to Madison, but we did not like our Yankee neighbors, they demanded too much credit. Streiff seemed to loose interest in the store and thought he would like to go farming with his family. So we bought a farm of 211 acres for $3000.00 and lived there together. This proved to be too lonesome for me, so my wife and children moved back to town, but my asthma grew worse. In 1868 my stepfather died. Everyone mourned who knew him, he was so well liked. He had releaved many from suffering with his simple remedies. He died in June.

In 1871, I bought two lots and built a comfortable home, but my health was very poorly. I had to smoke herbs almost every hour. I prepared myself for death. I was called to Monroe on business, where my son John took me as quick as possible. In spite of my warm clothing I suffered a severe chill. Then I got a severe pain in my abdomen, instantly I was releaved of my old sickness, asthma, with which I had suffered for nineteen years. I went to doctor Blumer but he could not help me. Then the secretive organs failed me. June 21 is marker the shortest night but it was the longest for me. I suffered immensely, the doctor with a very crude instrument tried to releave me, but ruptured my intestines.

His youngest daughter was asked to close this Autobiography. He died in 1879 at the age of 66 years. Mrs. J. J. Figi was his first great grandchild.

These are the children of JOSHUA and BARBARA WILD.
